Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 4 and 5 are allowed.

The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: The prior art does not disclose nor teach according to claim 5 an electronic board comprising of a grid of grid points on a flat surface, an illumination source having two different colors inside or below the surface, which exhibits a behavior which makes it useful for playing various game. The closest prior art Golad discloses a computer gaming device comprising of a grid of grid points on a flat surface, an illumination source having at least two different colors inside or below the surface, when a point is pressed by the player, the CPU informs the player if an incorrect point is pressed. When an incorrect point is pressed the player seeks help by the computer by depressing a help button on the board. When the help button is pressed the computer illuminates the different possible correct moves to make. Golad is does not disclose nor teach the evaluation of a legal move by the board checking in turn each of the pre-defined set of imaginary straight lines emanating from the point, assigning a value of 0 to each of these line that does not pass through an illuminated point, a value of 1 if the closest illuminated point that the line passes through is illuminated with the current player's color, and -1 if the closest illuminated point is illuminated in the other color, and then compares the sum of the values of all the line to the fixed number, and if the sum is larger or equal to the fixed number the point is a legal move and when no more legal moves, the board declares as winner the colour in which more point are illuminated.
